City of Cupertino Announces Promotion of Chad Mosley to Director of Public Works

CUPERTINO, CA – The City of Cupertino announces the promotion of Chad Mosley to the position of Director of Public Works. Mosley is an accomplished civil engineer with an impressive career spanning more than 25 years in land development and capital improvement projects and has worked for the City of Cupertino since 2009.

Most recently, Mosley has served in the role of Assistant Director of Public Works and City Engineer in the Public Works Department. In that role, he has represented the City in a wide range of duties, including oversight of land development, engineering, and significant management in the Capital Improvement Program.

“Chad is well respected within the Department of Public Works,” said City Manager Pamela Wu. “Chad is also well respected by the community. I look forward to him employing his highly productive way and skillset he is known for.”

Mosley’s journey in civil engineering began at the University of Pittsburgh, where he earned his Bachelor of Science degree in Engineering. Equipped with a solid educational foundation, he embarked on a career with numerous significant private and public development projects.

Outside of his professional endeavors, Mosley enjoys backpacking in places where he can disconnect from the daily hustle, or he can be found somewhere along the Russian River enjoying Sonoma County and all it has to offer.

Mosley officially assumes the new role on July 3.
